Family Celebrations

Family celebrations in our home were never just events; they were experiences filled with laughter, music, and, of course, dancing. I remember:

1. Birthdays: Each year, my mother would bake a cake, and we would gather around the living room, singing and dancing to our favorite songs. Her infectious laughter would fill the air, creating a sense of belonging and joy.
2. Holidays: During the holidays, our home became a hub of activity. My mother would lead the family in traditional dances, blending cultural heritage with our unique family style. It was a beautiful fusion that highlighted the importance of our roots.
3. Spontaneous Dance Parties: Often, when a favorite song played on the radio, my mother would grab my hand and pull me into the living room for an impromptu dance party. Those moments taught me to embrace spontaneity and find joy in the little things.
